

We support the proposed FAA regulations requiring airline tracking and reporting of animal transportation incidents. ALL animals deserve to be treated as living, breathing creatures and not just baggage! Consumers need to know about problems experienced by all animals, not just companion dogs and cats. After all, if an airline allows a bear going to a zoo to suffer from extreme heat or a mouse destined for a research lab to die from inadequate oxygen, these same conditions could jeopardize a companion dog or cat on the next flight.
